

Meet the Grindettes!

The Grindettes is a group of 4 women with unique backgrounds and one major thing in common:

We play poker for a living.

Who Are The Grindettes?

Poker pro and entrepreneur Katie Stone formed the Grindettes in April 2011 to show that women with diverse interests can play strong, aggressive poker and that making a living from the strategic game is not taboo. In addition to Stone, The Grindettes include Jennifer Shahade, a chess champion known for her creative projects that merge gaming and feminism; Jamie Kerstetter, a lawyer who is also one of the most feared players on the East Coast circuit; Katie Dozier, an expert in the math of poker and the author of “The Superuser” a poker thriller inspired by a notorious online scandal.

By working hard on their game and storming male-dominated fields, Grindettes bash stereotypes that women aren't suited for the game. In addition to a crowded schedule of prestigious preliminary events, all four Grindettes will be playing in the 2012 Main Event of the World Series of Poker, which will be televised on ESPN. The Main Event is open to anyone who can pay the $10,000 buy-in. However, in 2011 about 3.5% of the field was female. The Grindettes aim to inspire other women with their success.

Jamie Kerstetter qualified for another prestigious event at the 2012 World Series of Poker, the WSOP National Championship, set for July 6th. This exclusive million dollar freeroll is limited to 200 players and will also air on ESPN.

Look for The Grindettes wearing standout red heart patches at the Rio. The Grindettes are available for interviews or other media requests throughout the summer of 2012. High resolution photos are available upon request.
